I'm coming back to the shop floor, but this time I'm bringing some helping hands.

The start at Binabik AI has been anything but slow. Week one, I was demoing at a customer site. Week two, training a partner while solving a tough heavy-part manipulation problem. Week three, building my own demo. And in between: software development, mechanical design, prototypes, production and concept work. I've definitely got my hands full!

What makes Binabik the perfect fit for me: we combine classical control with AI. Proven methods provide the reliability industry demands, learning-based approaches add the flexibility it needs. That combination has been the common thread through all of my recent work, and now I get to bring it to real production lines.

A big thank you to the whole Binabik team for the warm welcome and for throwing me right into the action. Excited for the ride ahead.
